CDOT Releases Crash Videos

The Chicago Department of Transportation reminds everyone to drive safely, obey traffic signals and adhere to posted speed limits. To illustrate the danger of disobeying traffic laws, video from automated enforcement cameras of crashes that resulted from drivers running red lights this year have been released.

There are nearly 80,000 crashes in Chicago each year, 15,000 of which result in injuries, which is more than 40 crashes with injuries each day. About 3,000 crashes involve pedestrians. On average, 125 Chicagoans are killed each year in vehicle crashes across the Chicago's red light camera program, which has been operational since 2003, works to encourage drivers to obey red light signals to increase public safety. From 2005 to 2012 at the 174 intersections that currently have cameras, the number of crashes resulting in an injury or fatality was 22 percent lower, and crashes involving pedestrians were 23 percent lower, according to data provided by the Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT).

Last year, CDOT conducted a review of the performance of red light cameras after the annual release of IDOT data, and for the first time in the program, removed 32 cameras from operation at 16 intersections which had seen a significant reduction in serious crashes.

As 2013 IDOT crash $data\,-\,the\,\,most\,\,recent$ data available – is released, CDOT will again conduct a year-end review of red light camera performance to evaluate the program and consider removing or relocating cameras to where they would be more effective in increasing safety and decreasing the number of crashes, injuries and favear. talities.

Friends of Parks Issues Watch List

Friends of the Parks has prepared a Top Ten Watch List of Endangered Parks and Open Spaces which are threatened or have an uncertain future due to inappropriate development, neglect, inadequate funding, damaging policies, or harmful Administration actions. In the future, FOTP will compile a similar annual list based on nominations from concerned citizens and land use experts. Topping this year's list is the proposed lakefront site of the Lucas Museum and Chicago historic parks that may be impacted by the siting of the Obama Presidential Library.

"In the next 30 years, Cook County is expected to grow by almost 17%, adding over 850,000 residents and over 435,000 more jobs. This growth further creates the convergence of adverse forces: the demand to build in our urban open spaces versus the need of city residents and visitors to access these open areas as a respite from increasing urban density," says Cassandra Francis, President of Friends of the Parks

FOTP encourages local leadership to desist from building in our parks and open spaces and rather target underutilized, unimproved vacant sites throughout the city which can benefit from economic development, increased visibility and new construction.

Cervical Health Awareness Month

The Illinois Department of Public Health (IDPH) is encouraging women ages 21 and older to speak with their physician or health care provider about cervical cancer screening and prevention during "Cervical Health" Awareness ${
m Month.}$

Cervical cancer is almost always caused by human papillomavirus infection. With regular screenings and follow-up, this form of cancer is treatable when detected in its early stage.

recommend women have their first routine cervical screening at age 21," said IDPH Director Dr. LaMar Hasbrouck. "I also encourage women, along with young girls (ages 11 to 13) and their parents, to ask their health care provider about vaccines, which are effective at preventing certain forms of HPV." The Illinois Breast and Cervical Cancer Program provides free cervical cancer screenings to uninsured and under insured Illinois women between the ages of 35 and 64, regardless of income. Call the health line at 1-888-522-1282 for more information.

Sewer Projects In Brighton Pk.

14th Ward Alderman Edward M. Burke is alerting local residents that a major sewer replacement project will completely close Kedzie avenue at 47th street for the seven weeks beginning on Monday, Jan. 19tĥ.

The closure is necessary to complete extensive sewer improvements aimed at reducing flooding in the area. Local traffic will be allowed to proceed down 47th street at the intersection. According to officials from the Department of Water Management, new sewers will be installed beneath: 47th Street, from Kedzie to Richmond; 46th street, from Rockwell to Fairfield; Fairfield, from 46th to 47th Streets; and Richmond near 47th Street.

Residents are urged to follow detour signs. The improvements are part of Mavor Rahm Emanuel's "Building a New Chicago" program. During the coming months, further closures will occur as the project progresses.

The viaduct improvement project at 49th and Kedzie is scheduled to resume in early spring and be completed later this

Soil Exhibit At DePaul Art Museum

Beneath the grass and pavement that cover Chicago lies a vital, under-valued ecosystem that gives rise to a new art exhibition — "Rooted in Soil" — opening Jan. 29 at the DePaul Art Museum, 935 W. Fullerton.

Curators Laura Fatemi, interim director of the DePaul Art Museum, and her daughter Farrah Fatemi, an environmental scientist and assistant professor at Saint Michael's College, combined their knowledge of art and science to explore the underappreciated role of soil in human Upon entering the museum, visitors will en-counter a hanging terrarium built by artist Vaughn Bell, whose work challenges city dwellers to reconnect with nature. Bell invites viewers to enter the biosphere of the terrarium and peer out across the surface of the soil.

An installation in the show from Chicago-based artist Claire Pentecost. "Our Bodies, Our Soils" recalls an apothecary with tinctures of soil from the city that visitors can examine and smell. Pentecost will participate in 'Soil Matters: A Conversation on Art and Science' at the museum April 8.

The works of John Gerrard and Edward Burtvnaddress large-scale farming practices are altering the landscape and degrading the soil. Gerrard's animation "Dust Storm (Manter Kansas)" uses 3-D gaming software to reimagine the Dust Bowl era. He scrutinizes this historical environmental disaster and connects it with modern times, using footage of burning oil fields to suggest another impending environmental crisis. Burtynsky's large-scale aerial photographs of pivot irrigation reveal the vastness of the human imprint on the earth's surface.

Other artists offer radical and innovative solutions for conserving the environment, said Laura Fatemi. "The Infinity Burial Project" from Jae Rhim Lee includes a burial suit that combines technology and design to make funeral processes more ecologically friendly.
Activist and artist Jenny Kendler's "Milkweed Dispersal Balloons" performance includes biodegradable balloons filled with wildflower seeds, which visitors are invited to scatter to help feed monarch butterflies. Rang, a German artist, invites viewers to reflect on soil and transformation in his film "Light/Dark Worms." Johnson's film "Still Life" explores mortality and the passage of time using a bowl of fruit and "vanitas," a theme that Dutch painters used in the 17th century. Calls of songbirds and the thrum of Lake Shore Drive are heard in the sound installation, "Rooted in Sound." Recordings were gathered by the Chicago Wildsounds Project, a student group in De-Paul's environmental science department led by professor Liam Heneghan. The ongoing sound ecology project seeks to measure the correlation between soil health and sound. The museum will host "A Night of Chicago Wildsounds" with poetry. discussions and music on March 5 from 6-8 p.m.

A free opening reception will be held Jan. 29 from 5:30-7:30 p.m., with several of the artists attending and the curators giving a gallery talk at 6 p.m. The exhibition closes April 26. For more information on events related to "Rooted in Soil." visit http://museums.depaul.ed
