

Technical Education

By Dr. R. Pletsch

President Trump signed the "Strengthening Career and Technical Education For The 21st Century Act" on July 31st. According to Education Week, this legislation makes significant changes to federal law. The new law allows states to set their own goals for Career and Technical Education programs. This can help with filling jobs available in the state and eliminates a level of bureaucracy that followed the last such bill in 2006.

President Reagan was quoted as saying "there's no limit to what a man can do or where he can go if he doesn't mind who gets the credit" This time some did not want to be on record. So they agreed to have a voice vote - this means no one has to be on record for supporting a good bill that was supported by the wrong side of the aisle.

Like all bills some oppose it, but very few. States like Tennessee are already planning on closing programs that are "dead-end pathways". Why train people for non-existent jobs. How many tv repairman do we need. I have a friend with an MA Latin American History, who never wanted to teach, he just retired from the shoe department at K-Mart.

He was gainfully employed, but was it worth the $. This is our world - Prepare your kids. Call your legislator about your concern -- some even listen.
